

Your Centennial Legacy

NEWSLETTER FOR THE LIVING LEGACY SOCIETY, FALL 2020

From Generation to Generation

For Jim Koshland, Jewish continuity is not an abstract idea. It is a generation to generation commitment to the values and practices of his parents and grandparents.

"It was made clear to us that we were lucky and that we weren't special... that we had to give back," said Jim. "And it wasn't just writing checks. You needed to get personally involved."

Jim has been personally involved in Jewish organizations for decades, beginning with the Federation, which his grandfather and uncle helped found, and which he eventually led as Board Chair. Since then, he has chaired the Federation's Centennial Campaign, raising more funds than any other chair in Federation's history. As of June 30, approximately $203 million has been raised from 347 donors, enabling the Federation's endowment fund to help meet the Jewish community's unforeseen future needs.

Jim's Federation tenure has given him a unique perspective on the sustainability of our community. "It is so important because Centennial campaign funds are dollars in perpetuity that provide both a long-term stream of income while also being there for emergencies. In order to secure and keep our endowment strong, there are a few things we need. First, are good people and great leaders. Second is a good cause. And finally, I think it's important to realize that legacy giving is different. It takes longer to commit because the legacies we want to leave are precious."

Jim's other board service including American Jewish World Service, Jewish Senior Living Group, Jewish Vocational Services, Taube Koret Campus for Jewish Life, American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee (JDC), among others, has given him a unique perspective on the prospects for this Jewish community. Despite the crushing impact of COVID-19, where to date, over $16 million* in Federation endowment funds have been allocated in response to the crisis, Jim believes that we will find a way to adapt and grow. "I think that people in these times will be drawn into what they care about. Jewish values and continuity are really important, and people want to be part of that."

The Federation and the community are deeply grateful to Jim, who as his predecessors before him, continues to practice what the Talmud states—As my forefathers planted for me, so too shall I plant for my children—constructing a path forward for the benefit of all those yet to come.

Woman of Wisdom

Carol Weitz needs to be passionate about an organization’s mission and feel a personal connection to it when determining where to invest her time, money, and energy.

For Carol, these are the two deciding factors on where to invest among many deserving causes.

“The Federation’s mission is broad and enables funds to reach many diverse, important programs in our community, Israel, and around the world.”

Carol divulged that many of her most rewarding projects were those that fostered participation. “It’s not just financial support but the opportunity to know and understand the leadership of the organization and its team members. Working on Endowment and Leadership Development committees at the Federation has truly broadened my circle of friendships.” Some of those friends include iconic Jewish community leaders like Ann Bear z”l, Doris Blum z”l, Judith Chapman z”l, Arthur Zimmerman z”l, and Adele Corvin.

It is with their encouragement that Carol agreed to serve on the Federation’s Board and as Women’s Philanthropy president, where she helped raise critical funds and stewarded future generational involvement. “I participated in a Women in Leadership program several years ago which partnered us with younger females with whom I’ve stayed in touch and mentored over the years. It’s important to show them that they are never too small to make a big difference, whether it’s to dream, to participate, or give a gift.”

Equally important to Carol was establishing her Lion of Judah Endowment (LOJE), endowing her Federation annual gift in perpetuity, enabling her to provide support each year for her cherished Bay Area and global Jewish community. Her empathy and generosity stem from her own home, where it was instilled “to share what we have, no matter what the amount.”

Each Woman’s Enduring Generosity

Women today are taking on increasing philanthropic leadership roles along with their political, entrepreneurial, and cultural leadership. Establishing a Lion of Judah Endowment (LOJE) ensures a gift that will continue into the future—l’dor v’dor—from generation to generation. As of 2019, 4,500 Lions of Judah in North America raised $620 million—leaving a significant legacy to safeguard the values they hold dear. These funds will help provide both for the anticipated and unexpected needs of the future through a gift each year in the donor’s name to the Federation’s Annual Campaign in perpetuity.

The community thanks the following local Lions of Judah for their commitment:

A Jewish Journey

The American south of Steven Fayne's youth wasn't particularly "good for the Jews." In fact, growing up between Jacksonville, Florida and Nashville, Tennessee left him feeling a bit uncomfortable about being Jewish. "I grew up in a Conservative home, and I had my bar mitzvah but to be honest, with all the anti-Semitism, I didn't have such positive feelings about being Jewish."

And then came the Federation.

"In the early 80s, I got involved with Federation and went on a young leadership trip to Israel. And that turned me around... I became proud to be Jewish. And I came back and started getting active in the community."

That's an understatement. When Steven and his wife, Bunny, moved to the Bay Area in 1992, his involvement with Federation and other Jewish organizations soared to another level. In addition to serving as Federation Treasurer for two administrations, and on the Capital Planning Committee and Endowment Committee, he has become an enthusiastic supporter of the Jewish Campus for Senior Living (where he is a board member), the Jewish Film institute, and the Joint Distribution Committee. He even came full circle with his relationship to the south, helping to build the first Hillel House at his alma mater, Vanderbilt University.

Buildings are a passion for Steven. He is a Principal of Align Finance Partners and a nationally recognized leader in multifamily affordable housing. And he has shared much of that expertise with the Federation to the great benefit of the Bay Area Jewish community.

"In the early 80s, I got involved with Federation and went on a young leadership trip to Israel. And that turned me around... I became proud to be Jewish. And I came back and started getting active in the community."

When it comes to his Centennial Legacy and personal philanthropic priorities, Steven is concrete, almost literally. "I'm a bricks and sticks guy. And I wanted to contribute to any Jewish institution that needed money to build or rehabilitate a facility. So, our money is restricted to use for tangible things that would stand the test of time."

Steven's commitment to assuring a safe and vibrant Jewish future in the Bay Area, across the country, in Israel and around the world is rooted in an abiding love for the Jewish people. "I love being Jewish. I love being around Jews and I want to see the culture continue. That is what is important to me. The continuation from this generation to the next."

of their intention to make a legacy gift, are invited to reaffirm their commitment now to join the Centennial and to leave a legacy to the Jewish Community Federation and Endowment Fund, our sincere apologies. g and Endowments, at SindyC@sfjcf.org or call 415.512.6232.

Mentors and Friends

Barney Osher and John Pritzker don't have a lot of time to worry about the sort of legacies they want to leave for the Jewish community and the world. They're too busy creating them.

The roots of Barney's legacy began while working in the family business in Biddeford, Maine. "My father came from Russia and opened a hardware store, and each of us worked there as we grew up," he said. "And in those days, they didn't have organized Jewish agencies. We just had these guys dropping in with beards and black hats, asking for money to help people in need. So my father would give a dollar or two, and I could see how it could make a difference. If somebody needed something, you'd give. And that's all there was to it."

But in fact, there was much more to it. That seed of philanthropy planted over 80 years ago has grown into a lifetime of giving from Maine to San Francisco. Through the Osher Foundations, Barney and his wife Barbro have donated millions in support of education, the arts, medicine, and the Jewish community. In addition to providing significant financial resources, Barney also lent his leadership and time to chairing the Federation's Endowment Fund, and contributed to major projects such as the Osher Jewish Community Center in Marin, stepping up early to help in every Jewish communal emergency.

The center of that focus for Pritzker has been humanitarian and social causes including mental health and healthcare, environmentalism, the arts, and the wellbeing of the Jewish community. Toward that end, John currently sits on the board of Osher's Foundation alongside such Federation stalwarts as Laura Lauder, David Agger and Phyllis Cook.

Like Barney, John has given thousands of hours and millions of dollars to the causes he believes in. Both serve on the Centennial Campaign committee. And like Barney, John takes his philanthropy quite seriously, but not himself. "Why did I take on the role of Federation President? Temporary leave of my senses," he joked. "But the truth is I was sitting on the bench when they needed somebody, and while I've always been more comfortable giving money than raising money, as it turned out, I was pretty good at it."

To understand why John provides leadership in the community, you don't need to search for rabbinic explanations. You only need to know the rules that all scouts live by: "Listen, you just want to leave the campground better than you found it."

Similarly, Barney, who has pledged to donate the majority of his wealth to philanthropic causes, humbly summarized his reasons for deciding to give it all away. "There comes a point in your life when you say I've got so much, and I can't take it to the grave with me so I might as well do some good with it."

Barney and John have spent their decades-long friendship inspiring one another to support the Jewish and general community they both love so much. In so doing they have become role models for generations to come.

Barney Osher and John Pritzker

"Barney has been a mentor to me for over 30 years, and he taught me everything I know about philanthropy. Most importantly, focus, focus, focus."

– JOHN PRITZKER

The Book of Life: A Road Map for Generations to Come

Dan Safier, President & CEO of Prado Group and former chair of the Federation's Endowment Committee

The Book of Life is a stunning work of art that houses a unique treasury of testimonials from local donors, recording their ideals and motivations for keeping our Jewish community strong and healthy.

Designed by renowned Bay Area artist Joseph Goldyne, the book is prominently displayed in the Federation's building at 121 Steuart Street in San Francisco. All Centennial donors are invited to compose messages that will permanently document the personal thoughts, stories, and values that deepened their Jewish identity and inspired their philanthropy. Along with being included in the Book of Life, donors who have made commitments of $250,000 or more have their names inscribed on Jerusalem stone in the artistically crafted Wall of Honor, located in the Federation's lobby.

Invest in the Jewish Future

Create a legacy tailored to your special interest and needs.

One way to ensure that your annual Federation gifts live on in perpetuity is to establish a Perpetual Annual Campaign Endowment (PACE) or a Lion of Judah Endowment (LOJE). You can also establish or add to a special purpose fund in an area of importance to you. Perhaps you would like to make a gift to the Federation's endowment for seed projects or emergencies, or create another fund that will meet the future needs of the community.

Choose your gift vehicle. The simplest and most common way to make a legacy gift is through a bequest, which is a gift from your will or trust. Another vehicle—with great tax advantages—is your retirement plan (401(k) or IRA). To benefit from additional income during your lifetime, consider a charitable gift annuity or a charitable remainder trust. Life insurance, gifts of real estate, or other appreciated property are also options that may provide significant tax savings.

Contact us. You can reach us at 415.512.6232 to have a confidential conversation about your philanthropic and estate planning goals.

Centennial Wall of Honor

The Wall of Honor is the centerpiece of the Federation's lobby and stands as an enduring tribute to the Centennial donors' extraordinary generosity, recognizing those individuals and families whose gifts begin at $250,000. The individual Jerusalem stones in the sculpted wall allow new donors to be added and celebrated each year.
